Thanksgiving Travel: Destinations For Every Agenda

An Adventurous Trip in Cartagena

If Thanksgiving is nothing more than another excuse for a vacation, head south to Cartagena, Colombia, an increasingly popular travel spot and home to hip hotels like Casa San Agustín, a property comprised of three 17th-century mansions that surround a palm tree-lined aqueduct. With just thirty rooms and suites, the staff forms a personal relationship with each guest, offering insightful recommendations to first-time visitors. The best part? For those officially (or unofficially) boycotting the holiday, there won't be a turkey in sight (but plenty of bandeja paisa). Unless, of course, you request one from the staff. Rooms, from $400 a night; Calle de la Universidad 36-44; 855-272-
