

Flight Deal: U.S. to Cartagena from $250 Round-Trip

by BRIDGET HALLINAN

Grab your suitcase and set your out-of-office message—round-trip flights to Cartagena are more than half off right now on Delta, Avianca, and JetBlue. Fares to Cartagena are normally around $600, but flights from Fort Lauderdale start at $247 round-trip, non-stop. Pittsburgh flights are $275 round-trip (with an hour stop in Atlanta) and New York round-trips are as low as $380 (with a one-hour stop in Fort Lauderdale). Travel is available in September and October, but you'll need to move fast to get the low prices. A flight deal this good won't last through the day.

Expect temperatures in the 70s and 80s during your trip, give or take a few rainy days. Hit the local beaches, like Castillogrande, when it's sunny and duck into museums (there's one dedicated to chocolate) if it starts to drizzle. Hotel-wise, check in to the Casa San Agustín, which features 17th-century colonial architecture—think frescoes, wooden beams in the ceiling, and a gleaming white facade—in the heart of the city's Old Town, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The hotel has a killer breakfast, with fresh arepas and butifarra (minced-pork sausage), but you can also find great food when you're exploring the streets. Designer Philip Lim told Traveler he has no regrets about blowing off a "must-try" restaurant for charcoal chicken from a local vendor.

How to book: Atlanta, Baltimore, Fort Lauderdale, Hartford, Jacksonville, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Raleigh, and Richmond are all included in the deal, according to Scott's Cheap Flights—but check Google Flights to see if a city near you is participating. The calendar tool can help you find the best dates and prices that work for you. Just make sure you select "one stop or fewer" before you look, as some of the available flights have two layovers. ♦
