As long as you can handle the heat (so to speak), planning a trip to Cartagena in July is a no-brainer. A number of airlines now offer direct routes—flights from New York clock in at just under 5 hours—and, with no time difference, visiting the seaside city over a long weekend is easier than ever. What’s more, you’ll avoid the crowds that flock to the bustling port during the holidays, and also have your pick of the litter when it comes to hotels. Among the best? Casa San Agustin, Hotel Charleston Santa Teresa and Tcherassi Hotel & Spa—all located within the walls of the old city.
